

Abuse/Crisis Counselor

Keondin Jones
Mrs. Miller
Period 4
May 10, 2011

What do they do?

- Domestic violence counselors first inform their clients of the immediate options available to them so that they can leave an abusive environment.
- Counselors also explain their clients' legal rights to them.

Education

- Entry into a master's program in social work requires a bachelor's degree.
- Master's degree programs can take a while to complete.
- The higher the education, the greater the job.

Training

- If you want to train to become an abuse counselor, you have to learn how to be an aid to people.
- You also need to have some work or volunteer service experience available.
- You also need to provide counsel to patients.
- You should have a friendly attitude.

Where do they work?

- Abuse/crisis counselors work indoors in offices or counseling rooms.
- Abuse counselors work as part of an informal team dedicated to stopping domestic violence.

Time for pay!!!

- Full and part time work can vary depending on what the average pay is.
- Full time workers make $30,000 to around $70,000 dollars a year.
- Part time workers make $10 to $22 dollars an hour.

Likes & dislikes

- My likes and dislikes of this job can make people really think.
- I like being able to do direct service and help customers who deal with problems on a daily basis.
- I dislike this job because it can be difficult not to know the outcome of the caller's situation.

Conclusion

- I have found out that this job requires a lot more than high education.
- This job works as a team that is working to stop abuse.
- This job should be a motivating opportunity for young and newcomers that really want a job... just like me!!!

Credits

- The End
- Thanks to: careercruising.com, google.com/images, and yellowpages.com.

